College in High School

The Office for Catholic Schools initiated discussions with local Catholic universities and colleges to form articulation agreements between our Catholic high schools and local Catholic universities and colleges. The purpose of forming these articulation agreements is to provide a means to bring our vision "Forming for Life" to fruition. As part of this vision, it is our desire to provide a seamless offering of Catholic school education, pre-kindergarten through post-secondary. By forming these articulations with our local Catholic post-secondary institutions, we hope to provide an opportunity to our Catholic youth to experience their formation in the Catholic Faith into adulthood. In turn, these young adults may be more prone to stay in our local Catholic communities, forming relationships locally, and having a positive impact on the Catholic Church through their service, leadership and vocations within our Catholic communities into the future.

The provisions of the articulation agreements offer our Catholic high school students the following:

1. The ability to complete collegiate coursework prior to graduation from high school (at a reduced rate);
2. The ability to automatically qualify for substantial, collegiate scholarships as they pursue post-secondary studies within our local Catholic universities and colleges.

The Office for Catholic Schools has had discussions with leadership of several of our local Catholic universities and colleges. Seton Hill University was the first to act on approving such an articulated agreement, followed by St. Vincent, Mt. Aloysius and La Roche Colleges. We look forward to solidifying articulations with other local Catholic post-secondary institutions into the future as part of a comprehensive offering of dual enrollment studies and post-secondary scholarships for our Diocesan high school students and future graduates.
